WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

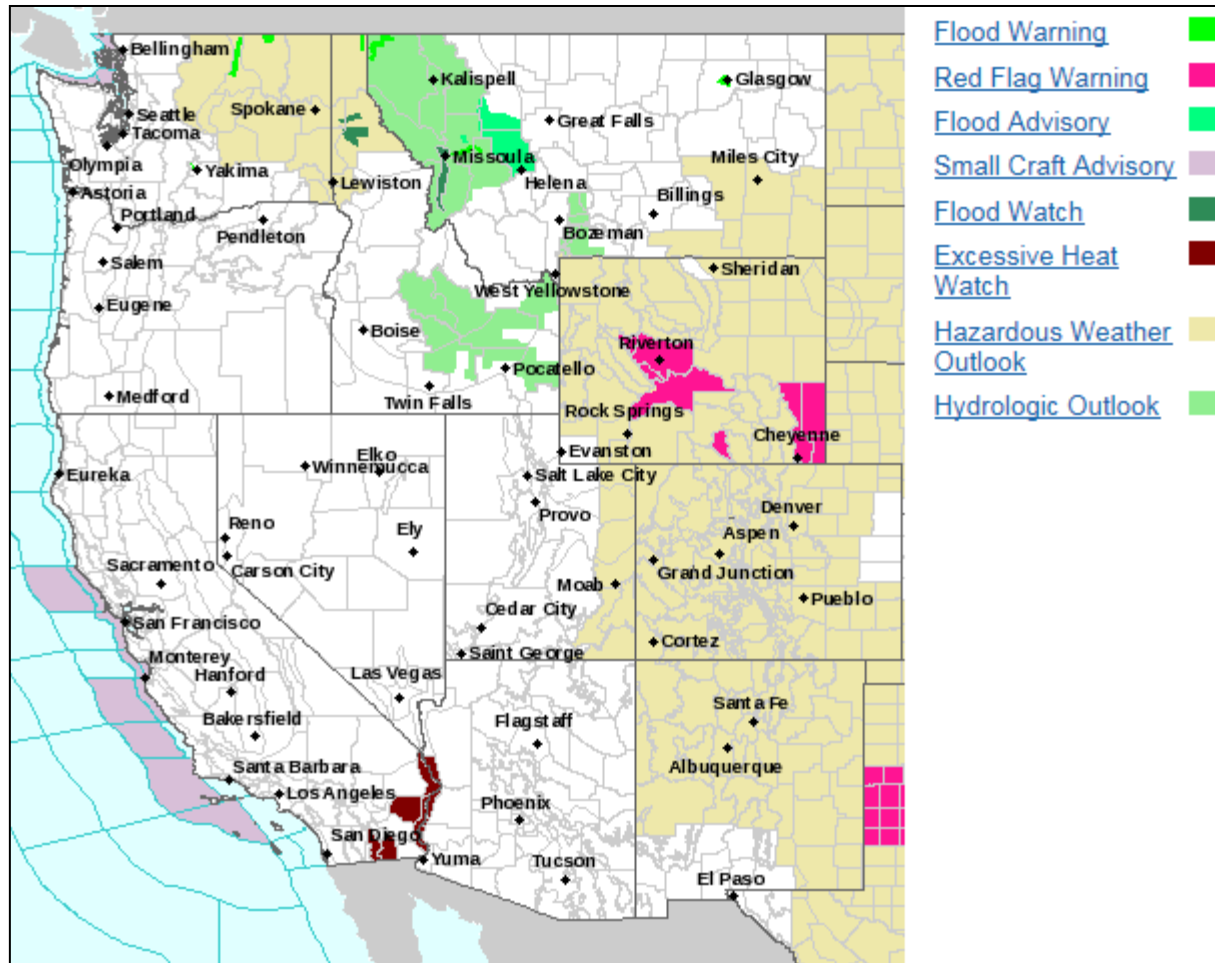

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Dry and warm weather is forecast to continue. A few showers or thunderstorms are possible across northern mountains late Tuesday and Wednesday night this week. High pressure returns Thursday then strengthens as dry north winds bring clear skies and the first spring time round of potentially hot weather to the Bay Area Friday into the weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

High pressure will remain over much of the Southern California region through the workweek, resulting in unseasonably warm weather. Breezy and cooler conditions are expected late in the week. Excessive Heat Watches return Wednesday for Western Imperial County and the Colorado River Valley area.
